Plenary Panel: The Humanities and Rebuilding Public Trust in Higher Ed

Grand Ballroom

The Pew Research Center released the results of a survey in July 2017 that revealed a growing and partisan distrust of higher education. This panel will consider how perceptions of the humanities are implicated in the broader distrust and how we might draw on the tools of the humanities to build trust.

PANELISTS

Lynn Pasquerella, American Association of Colleges and Universities

Frederick Lawrence, The Phi Beta Kappa Society

Ben Vinson, George Washington University

Paula Krebs, Modern Language Association

MODERATOR

James Grossman, American Historical Association

Breakout Sessions

New Advocates Training

Executive Room

Learn about the budget and appropriations process, our requests to Members of Congress, how to structure a Hill visit, and the advocacy resources at your disposal.

FACILITATORS

Beatrice Gurwitz, National Humanities Alliance

Alexandra Nowicki, National Humanities Alliance

Making the Case for Studying the Humanities on College Campuses

Sagamore Room

This session will explore how humanities faculty and administrators are recruiting students and making the case for the value of studying the humanities as an undergraduate. After a preview of Study the Humanities, a new website featuring qualitative and quantitative data on the value of studying the humanities as an undergraduate, participants will discuss creative approaches for engaging a variety of audiences, including parents, incoming students, career services, and upper-level administrators.

Stephen Kidd, National Humanities Alliance

Librarian's Role in Advocating for the Humanities

Hermitage Room

This session will address the vital role librarians can play in preserving the vitality of the humanities. As scholarship in the humanities and social sciences continues to evolve, librarians are well positioned to engage allies and make the case that funding for the humanities is essential for economic, cultural, and civic life. We will tackle questions like why advocating for the humanities is necessary in a competing arena and how we can best advocate for public and private support.

James O'Donnell, Arizona State University

12:30 p.m.

Luncheon

Grand Ballroom

Luncheon Welcome

Frederick Lawrence, Secretary and CEO, The Phi Beta Kappa Society

Luncheon Address

Jon Parrish Peede, Senior Deputy Chairman, National Endowment for the Humanities

Breakout Sessions

Changing Narratives About Humanities in Higher Ed

Sagamore Room

How can publicly engaged humanities work help to challenge common narratives about the humanities in higher education? Participants will explore the state of the field of publicly engaged work and discuss ways to leverage this work to broaden perceptions of the humanities in higher education on institutional, local, state, and national levels.

DISCUSSANTS

Brent Björkman, Kentucky Folklife Program at Western Kentucky University

Jodi Skipper, University of Mississippi

David Trowbridge, Marshall University

Andrew G. Vaughn, American Schools of Oriental Research

Daniel Fisher, National Humanities Alliance

Showcasing the Local Impact of the NEH

Hermitage Room

This session will help attendees make the case for federally-funded humanities programs at the local and national levels. After examining a series of high-impact NEH grants, attendees will discuss effective ways to convey impact and practice pitching their own or other's projects.

DISCUSSANTS

Bonnie Lynn-Sherow, Kansas State University

Katherine Walter, University of Nebraska–Lincoln

Christina Weber, North Dakota State University

Cecily Hill, National Humanities Alliance

Raising Your Visibility Locally

Executive Room

This session will explore ways to raise the visibility of humanities scholarship and projects locally and year-round. We will identify ways to engage local press and Members of Congress. We will also discuss how partnerships with campus government relations and communications offices can help achieve these goals.

Kristen Adams, Cornell University

Jessica Berman, University of Maryland, Baltimore County

Rachel Brubaker, University of Maryland, Baltimore County

Timothy Murray, Cornell University
